Double-entry accounting is a practice that helps minimize errors and increases the chance that your books balance. This method gets its name because you enter all transactions twice. When it comes to double-entry bookkeeping, the key formula for the balance sheet ( $\text{Assets} = \text{Liabilities} + \text{Equity}$ ) plays a major role.

When using a double-entry system, two things must always be balanced. The general ledger, which tracks debit and credit accounts, must always be balanced. Additionally, the balance sheet, where assets – liabilities = equity, must also be balanced. The examples below will clarify the rules for double-entry bookkeeping.

Double-entry bookkeeping is an accounting system where every transaction is recorded in two accounts: a debit to one account and a credit to another. For example, if a business takes out a $5000 loan, assets are credited $5000 and liability is debited $5000. The $5000 is both an increase in cash and an outstanding debt, according to The Balance.
