Understanding the difference between procurement and supply chain management is crucial, as these terms are not interchangeable but they often get mixed up. Procurement is the process of acquiring the goods your company needs for its business model. Supply chain management is the process of turning those goods into products and distributing them to customers as efficiently as possible.

Procurement vs. Supply Chain Management: What's Different?

Global procurement is a broad concept of strategic nature that is usually found in larger firms. It includes procurement from company-internal and company-external suppliers and covers some issues of production and product development (Schneider et al., 2011). The need to increase the number of suppliers, non-availability of certain commodities in domestic markets, competitiveness of overseas resources and access to worldwide technology are among some of the reasons for a global procurement
