The same applies when using 'Manual Mode' with ISO in Auto - where I want to set a specific aperture and shutter, but am happy that the camera can meter correctly (perhaps with some EC). (I'll use this when shooting my children bodyboarding at the beach, for example - where I want a fast shutter to freeze motion, and a wide aperture to isolate them from others)

Mastering manual mode can be tough for the beginner though. There's quite a bit of new terminology and a lot of moving parts that can throw you off track. That said, if you focus on the basics (and have a
